We are pleased that you would like to use the Family Empowerment Scale (FES) in your research.

The following are included in this PDF:

1) The FES instrument
2) The FES scoring guide
3) A list of published studies that have used the scale

Please cite properly, whether the citation be in printed form or on a website. We would be very interested to hear about your experiences and findings, and to receive a copy of any publication referencing the scale.

For further specific or technical information, contact Dr. Barbara Friesen at friesenb@pdx.edu.
These questions ask about several areas of your life—your family, your child’s services, and your community. The questions include many different activities that parents may or may not do. For questions that do not apply to you, please answer “Not Applicable”. Also, we know that other people may be involved in caring for and making decisions about your child, but please answer the questions by thinking of your own situation. Feel free to write any additional comments at the end.

Scores for the subscales are simple means. Calculate the mean for each subscale by adding the scores for the subscale items that have NOT been answered “Not Applicable,” and dividing by the number of questions that were answered “Never...Very Often” (1 through 5). If there are missing items (up to 3) in responses 1-5, add the scores for the subscale items, and divide by the number of answered questions.

You can add responses to all of the subscales for an overall score but be aware that each of the subscales addresses quite a different topic (Family, Service System, Community). Many published articles have employed the method of adding all items for an overall score. Examining each subscale score in relation to other variables of interest is another approach that may yield more specific information.

We suggest using only the subscales that are relevant to the information you want to gather, or that you predict might change as a result of an intervention (treatment, program, or training) that you are using. For example, if the intervention addresses only the first subscale (Family - how confident/efficacious the caregiver feels about his/her ability to meet the child’s needs or intervene effectively), then adding the scores from all subscales together is likely to dilute any change because of lack of movement in areas not addressed by the intervention (Service System or Community).
